

LYNN JANIGAN

Lynn's work is shaped by her attentive investigation of the natural world and how memory and experience is extracted from life's observations. Often exploring new directions, either with the content or medium, Lynn relies on strong drawing skills, an interest in the human form and a keen sense of observation. These facets, inherent in her process, often develop into her signature haunting images.

Lynn's art has found its way into several private collections and has garnered awards.

Trained as a commercial artist at Dawson College and later graduating with a BFA from Concordia University, she lives and paints in Lacolle, Quebec.
